and abuse. We welcome the steps taken to provide training on standards of conduct, including through pre-deployment and in-mission induction training and awareness-raising programmes, as well as, the technical assistance offered to the States in developing their domestic criminal laws, at their request.

As the top TPPCC,

During pre-deployment training, our peacekeepers are made aware of possible repercussions for lapses or acts of sexual exploitation and abuse and other crimes. We have developed customized training module taking into account the unique cultural settings of different field missions.

Although a lot has been done measures taken by the UN to that end, including by providing a platform for discussion. But more can be done.

It is important extreme caution should be taken to ensure confidentiality of the communications regarding allegations of misconduct in order to avoid unfair stigmatization of the persons concerned, especially Nations to ensure implementation of relevant resolutions on the criminal accountability of the UN officials and experts on Missions as well as other national officials on Mission.

I thank you, Madam Chair.
