

PRESS RELEASE
MDG Report 2008

Progress in achieving UN anti-poverty goals for 2015 under threat, new report finds

H - A A

The 11th annual report on progress in achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) for 2008, published by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), shows that progress towards the goals is slowing down and that the 2015 deadline is under threat.

The 2008 report shows that progress towards the MDGs has slowed down since 2002, and that the 2015 deadline is under threat. The report also shows that the 2008 report is the first in a series of reports that will be published by the UNDP.

The report also shows that progress towards the MDGs has slowed down since 2002, and that the 2015 deadline is under threat. The report also shows that the 2008 report is the first in a series of reports that will be published by the UNDP.

The report also shows that progress towards the MDGs has slowed down since 2002, and that the 2015 deadline is under threat. The report also shows that the 2008 report is the first in a series of reports that will be published by the UNDP.

The report also shows that progress towards the MDGs has slowed down since 2002, and that the 2015 deadline is under threat. The report also shows that the 2008 report is the first in a series of reports that will be published by the UNDP.

Action on the UN agenda

The report also shows that progress towards the MDGs has slowed down since 2002, and that the 2015 deadline is under threat. The report also shows that the 2008 report is the first in a series of reports that will be published by the UNDP.

The report also shows that progress towards the MDGs has slowed down since 2002, and that the 2015 deadline is under threat. The report also shows that the 2008 report is the first in a series of reports that will be published by the UNDP.

(over)

