Future Generation are still to come!

We have the possibility to influence future generation's health simply by taking care of pregnant women all over the world.

Women can give birth to healthy children ready to overcome the challenges they will face in their life.

Each of us has the right to be born in the best possible conditions with the capacity of developing his/her full potential.

We recommend that UN Members States build a common program based on the « 1001 critical days manifesto » of UK government to bring attention and take care of human beings from conception to two years old. This program to be implemented by all governments to protect pregnant women and their children.

This is a necessary step to achieve SDG 3 of well-being and health for all.

It has to be, so don't wait, let's start right now!
